Emotions run high as city officials installed

Mayors, city councilmen, city clerks and city treasurers were installed in several local cities Tuesday night but none of the ceremonies was as emotion-charged as that in Upland. George Gibson turned the Upland mayor's seat over to John McCarthy in a session marked with emotional speeches and tears. Gibson, retiring after serving eight years as mayor and a total of 16 years on the council, praised the city and forward-thinking city government in his parting address.

He voiced approval of the new city council, saying the election of McCarthy as mayor and Al Canestro as councilman reflected voters' confidence and appreciation for "an honest, stable city council that will listen and respond to their ideas and

Turning to his successor, Gibson added the vote was a "tribute to a man" who had worked hard for the city and was "without a superior when it comes to honesty and Gibson's voice cracked noticeably in the closing lines of his prepared talk as he said what a privilege it had been to serve Upland, "the city I love so much.

Councilman Bill Bottin, who ran unsuccessfully for the mayor's seat, stepped down to give his post to Canestro. He echoed Gibson's sentiments on the rewards of serving the city. City Treasurer Robert Thrall, who served Upland for 30 years, handed his duties to Walter Reardon.

The council unanimously named Councilwoman Ina Petokas a mayor pro tem, the post previously held by McCarthy.

ONTARIO

A total of five incumbent city officials stood up in the Ontario City Council Chambers Tuesday night to repeat their vows of office.

City Clerk DeLoris E. Arterburn was sworn back into office by Deputy City Attorney Robert Dougherty first so that she could administer the oaths of office to the rest of the officials.

Council members Faye Myers Dastrup, Homer Briggs and Beecher Medlin were all sworn back onto the council and Kenneth Keenly was sworn back into office as city treasurer.

RANCHO CUCAMONGA

Phil Schlosser, who received the most votes of any candidate in last week's Rancho Cucamonga elections, was appointed mayor Tuesday night by his fellow councilmen.

Following a unanimous vote for Schlosser, the council voted 3-2 to appoint Art Bridge mayor pro tem. The vote for Bridge was completed after a second round of secret balloting.

Schlosser takes over from James Frost who served as mayor since the city was incorporated 21/2 years

Schlosser, Bridge, Frost, Jon

Mikels and Mike Palombo were all re-elected in last week's elections. Bridge was an appointed incumbent who took over for Charles West when West resigned last year.

West was in the audience last night to congratulate the council. The secret balloting was conducted in open session following a five-minute executive session at which the mechanics of electing a mayor were explained.

Prior to the executive session the council took the oath of office administered by City Manager Lauren Wasserman.

Wasserman was sworn in as city clerk and Finance Director Harry Empey was sworn in as city treasurer.

"I'm honored and humbled," Schlosser said as he took Frost's

Each councilman thanked supporters and voters for the outcome of the citywide election.

"They sent us back to do it again because we didn't do it right the first time," Schlosser joked.

Schlosser, president of a local forge company, will be mayor for an indeterminate time. The council has power to remove and elect a mayor at any time.

In leaving his post as mayor, Frost thanked the city staff and expressed relief that after running individually for the council, councilmen could again work

MONTCLAIR

Councilmen-elect George C. Klotz and Walter Hackett Jr. took their seats officially Tuesday as the Montclair City Council formally accepted the vote totals from last week's election.

Richard C. Webster, at 26 the voungest man ever to serve on the council, and Nicholas Kelch, a former community action committee and planning commission member, formally stepped down at the special meeting, amid applause and congratulations.

Plaques of appreciation were presented to both men for 'outstanding contribution' to the city as elected officials by Mayor Harold Hayes.

Webster said he would probably sit on the council again one day soon. "I was active in the city prior to my being on this council," he said, "and I will continue to be Kelch, whose career of public service spans a decade, explained he did not seek re-election because he and his family are moving to Ontario. Kelch said, "I've enjoyed my experiences on the council...and it's with great sorrow that I'm leaving. The city has an excellent reputation and I'm glad to say I helped to make it a little better."

The selection of a mayor pro tem was postponed until next week since the current Mayor Pro Tem Leonard Paulitz was absent from the meeting.

New career in real estate ahead

Upland's Mayor Gibson retires after serving the city 16 years

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

George Gibson is ready to retire for the third time in his 68 years so he can have more time to pursue

Gibson stepped down from his post as Upland mayor Tuesday after serving on the city council for 16 years. That doesn't mean, however, that he plans to lead a life of leisure.

His white hair may belie his age, but Gibson is tanned and fit. His good health comes from running at least a mile every day for the past 15 years, and perhaps from not taking life too seriously.

Gibson has never given himself a chance to be bored. After more than 20 years as an agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he retired to work 15 years as superintendent of plant protection at Kaiser Steel Corp. in Fontana. In 1976 he retired again, and after his third retirement Tuesday as mayor, he will have more time to devote to his new career in real estate.

During his tenure as FBI agent, Gibson gathered a generous share of hair-raising tales,

He helped track down eight Nazi saboteurs who landed off the Long Island coast in a submarine during World War II. After hundreds of hours of patient surveillance, the men were picked up in various locations from Chicago to Miami.

Six of the eight were executed, and the remaining two given life sentences.

Other cases included white slave trafficking on the East Coast, bank robberies and draft dodgers.

Not only was Gibson never shot at in the line of duty, but he says defendents he brought to trial often became my best friends.

'Most hardened criminals know they're taking a calculated risk," he said. "By the time they're actually caught, they have a great deal of respect for the man who tracked them down.

Gibson and his wife Louise moved to Upland in 1947 after he worked on a bank robbery in the area

He got to know local police, and even though housing was tight managed to find a place with the help of the Chief of Police Gene Mueller and Constable Sam Barker.

As much as he enjoyed it, Gibson said being an FBI agent was a young man's job, and in 1961 retired from service. Three days later he started in his new post as superintendent of plant protection at Kaiser Steel Corp.

A complete about-face from the FBI post, Gibson headed a staff of 10 supervisors and 175 employees, and was responsible for handling problems ranging from fire to health as well as security

In 1964, Gibson recalls he was drafted to run for the post of Upland city councilman.

You know what 'drafted' means," he says with a chuckle 'That's any time two or more people think you ought to run for of-After a campaign based on increased industry, business and quality development, Gibson started a trend he continued in each of his four elections, by receiving the highest number of votes. He is proud of his accomplishments on the council and as mayor. He remembers Upland as being one of the few cities in the area with a master plan in the 1960s, and the fights with developers over zoning requirements.

'We were dedicated to quality,' he said. "I always supported low density (zoning) to insure high quality homes.

Upland was also one of the first cities in the state to install underground utility lines, despite protests from developers, and Gibson was directly responsible for starting Upland's Architectural

'Tom Harris (currently on the city's planning commission) told me about a similar group in Claremont. There were misgivings on the part of older members of the council on starting a commission, but we finally got it off the ground. I think it's been a good idea The commission reviews the exteriors of buildings, signs and other major structures in order to keep a standard of quality throughout the Gibson is also proud of the sign ordinance he instituted after researching similar restrictions in other cities.

"It was a bloody battle," he said, "but I think we ended up with a good compromise.'

He feels, however, some of the intent of the ordinance has been defeated by a lack of city supervision, and support hiring a code enforcement officer to ensure the strict criteria are adhered to.

When he steps down from the mayor's post, Gibson will be able to throw himself full force into his new career in real estate. A year ago February he joined Republic Sales Co. Inc., a real estate brokerage firm for Lewis Homes Inc., as a real estate associate.

"I really like it," he said enthusiastically. "It's completely different than anything I've ever done. I've always worked for somebody else before.' He said he enjoys the challenge of working with people and finances.

You either feel dismay or exhilaration," he said. "It's terrific." He admits the idea of slowing down hasn't really occurred to him.

Upland council agrees to name appointee to post

Upland City Council members agreed unanimously Tuesday to fill an empty council seat by appointment rather than special election.

The seat, vacated when John McCarthy was voted as mayor in the April 8 elections, must be filled by May 15 according to state law. McCarthy, in one of his first actions as mayor, suggested appointing a council member after accepting applications from all interested Upland residents.

He said City Clerk Dee Carpenter estimated the cost of a special election at $15,000, an expenditure he felt was "unnecessary

Instead, interested persons may pick up applications and a statement of economic interests at the city clerk's office. Completed applications must be filed with the city by April 25.

Council members will be given a list of all applicants with background information. Each will designate three top choices in order of preference and return the list to the mayor by 5 p.m. April 30.

If there is a general consensus of opinion, the new council member will be given the oath of office at a special meeting in early May.

If not, interviews will be conducted during an open special session, and a replacement will be chosen after the interviews coming up for re-election in 1982. Applicants must be 18 years old and, reside within the corporate

By DINAH ROSE

Staff Writer Representatives of the Upland Teachers' Association presented a "partial initial" contract proposal for the coming year to members of the Upland School District board of trustees at a recent meeting. The preliminary action named two areas for consideration during negotiations for the 1980-1981

An early retirement incentive program, similar to that in several local school districts, and expanded contracts for summer school teachers were mentioned. A public hearing was set for 5:30 p.m. April 22 to discuss the Upland Teachers' Association proposal In other action, the board approved instituting a library aide program by a split vote. Trustees Dale Andersen, Barry Brandt and Robert Ellis voted in favor of starting the program immediately, before the outcome of Proposition 9 on the June ballot is decided. Trustees Dina Hunter and Rick Minnis voted against the decision. School libraries in the district are currently staffed primarily by volunteers.

The Library Concern Committee, comprised of parents and staff members from the elementary schools, told trustees new books require a great deal of preparation before they are ready for circulation. Committee members said the district has boxes of new and donated books waiting to be processed, adding people have been asked not to donate books until the overload can be dealt with.

In addition, they said, volunteers are becoming more difficult to find, as many mothers of elementary students are turning to paying jobs rather than volunteer

The committee said by starting the program with paid staff members for the libraries now, there was a chance of bringing the libraries up to date by the beginning of fall classes Trustees also received a report on fundamental schools, requested in December by Parents for Fundamental Schools District officials visited schools following the back-tobasics philosophy in Chino, Fontana and Pasadena, and further researched the "school-within-a-school" approach. Fundamental schools, besides concentrating on reading, writing and arithmetic, also call for strict dress codes, corporal punishment and patriotism. The staff report said many of the educational objectives of the fundamental school are already met in the district, which was, in many respects, "superior to any of the schools visited. There were no parents or representatives from the parents' committee supporting the concept at the meeting, and after limited discussion, the board declined to take any action.

Late start proposed in district calendar

The Upland School District trustees heard for the first time the proposed school calendar for the 1980-1981 year at a recent meeting.

The most notable change from previous years was a later starting date. Classes, which usually start the first part of September, will begin Sept. 15 if the calendar is eventually adopted.

Bids sought for airport remodeling

Bids will be opened Monday in San Bernardino for the construction of a $1 million terminal building at the Chino Airport.

Specifications call for an arrangement whereby the contractor will build the facility and the county will lease it back on a monthly basis until the costs are paid off in 30 years or less. Airport officials say there is enough demand for space in the terminal to ascertain that the monthly lease is adequately covered by the income. By having the developer finance the contstruction, the county will avoid the need to use public funds for financing. The county wants three separate ground-level buildings tied together with a second-story structure for a total floor space of 24,632 uare feet. The second stowill house a 7,848-square-root restaurant. Estimated cost of the project is more than $1 million. The bids will be studied by the county's airport

Grant helps Cal Poly to save energy

A U.S. Department of Energy grant for $156,477 for seven campus energy conservation projects has been received by Cal Poly Pomona. The grant was awarded to William J. Donovan, physical plant supervising electrician and grant applicant, under the National Conservation Policy Act.

The conservation projects funded include one solar heating project and six lighting ones. The total cost of the project. $165,000 with Cal Poly funding the difference, will more than pay for itself in 12 years. With the grant money. Cal Poly will install solar collectors to heat domestic hot water in the Kellogg gymnasium and be able to save half the energy used by the total building, Donovan

In addition, the grant funds will be used to install newer, more efficient, lower energy lighting fixtures and more automatic controls for lights in numerous campus areas.

Metal halide and highpressure sodium lighting will be installed where fluorescents can be replaced in such places as the sheep, swine and beef units, the physical plant warehouse, auto shop and the Kellogg gym. Another lighting savings will be effected by equipping lighting fixtures that are near windows with photo cells so they will not burn when sufficient light is provided from natural sources. According to Donovan, university will save $14,000 a year in energy costs utilizing these energysaving techniques at today's energy prices, and proportionately more each year as energy costs rise.

Private Property Rights...Protect Them

Ours Vs. The Government's

Private Property Week April 13-19

Even though we own property and have a deed to prove it...

Even though the Constitution and Fifth Amendment assure us that we can't be deprived of our property without due process of law and just compensation...

The government has property rights that can limit ours.

The right to tax.

The right to regulate by enacting and enforcing buildings codes, zoning, and other restrictive regulations.

The right to take property for public use by condemning and paying a fair price.

The right to return ownership to the state if the real owner dies without a will or known heirs.

Some limitations can be justified in the public interest. But we must always assure that a proper balance is maintained between public and private rights.

THE ONTARIO-UPLAND-CHINO BOARD OF REALTORS® observes Private Property Week every year at this time. It celebrates our right to own private property and reminds us not to take this right for Let's all participate - in the observance, and in a determination to protect the freedom we now enjoy.

Oranges tops for snacking

Have you wondered what's become of the "three square meals" a day? Well it's being replaced by "breakfast-on-the-run," mini-meals and snack times. And with this change in our eating habits has come a new interest in fresh fruits Recent consumer surveys show that fruit is one of the top foods purchased for snacks, desserts and packed lunches. People like fruit because it is refreshing, nutritious and usually has a low amount of calories.

A fresh fruit arriving just in time for your winter menu planning is the bumper crop of California-Arizona navel oranges. They are sweet, juicy, easy-to-peel, virtually seedless and one medium orange has more than the amount of vitamin C recommended for the day. This makes them perfect to tuck into a lunch bag or for an after-school snack

When the crowd returns from the bowling alley or the ping pong game is over, here are some other ideas to serve as easy "fill 'em ups," along with those nutritious navel oranges.

Navels, navels everywhere and all so good to eat. That's the latest word from California and Arizona, where growers have produced the largest crop of navel oranges in the history of the two states.

And what perfect timing! The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences has just announced the 1980 Revised Recommended Dietary Allowances and one of the major changes is an increase in the amount of vitamin C being recommended. Fresh citrus fruit is one of the best sources of vitamin C. A medium navel orange is not only tasty and refreshing, but will provide more than the 60 mg. of vitamin C now recommended by the Academy for daily intake by the average male or female 15 years or older.*

According to Gordon Henderson, vice president, fresh fruit sales and marketing for Sunkist Growers Inc., this year's navel crop is one of the finest eating in many years - the fruit is sweet, juicy and ready to be enjoyed as a quick snack or in many other ways. Local markets are now offering plenty of this top quality, nutritious fruit. Henderson added that supplies of tangerines from the west will also be very good in the weeks ahead, especially the kinnow mandarin and minneola tangelo varieties. The tangerines will have excellent flavor, color and, like the navel, are a good source of vitamin C. Fresh winter lemon supplies will be down from last winter. However, despite adverse weather conditions last year which affected this winter's crop, growers expect fresh lemon supplies to increase in the months

So don't let the winter blahs get you down! Enjoy some western sunshine — use lots of colorful, nutritious navel oranges and other western grown citrus fruit to tempt taste buds and brighten menus

Peeling hard - cooked eggs is easy if you first crackle the shell by gently tapping it on a counter or table top. Then roll the egg between your hands to loosen the shell. Start peeling at the large end where the air cell is located. Holding the egg under running water or dipping it into a bowl of water usually makes peeling easier.

ariety spices any pie crust

It all started with the apple - apple pie that is. Once people discovered the delicious idea of putting pastry ina pan and then filled the pan with fruit tossed with corn starch and cinnamon sugar, they didn't stop there. Soon they began experimenting and created deep-dish pies, appetizer pies, main dish pot pies and hundreds of other variations on the theme.

The classic crust for pies is made with flour, shortening, salt and water. The traditional pie plate is still favored, but pies can also be prepared in quiche pans, individual tartlet pans or deep dish casseroles.

For best results when preparing the crust, make sure water added to the flour mixture is ice cold. When rolling out the crust, go easy on flouring the rolling surface. A pastry cloth rubbed with flour makes the whole process almost foolproof. To discourage fruit pies from boiling over and to allow steam to escape from all pies, cut slits in the top of the crust before baking or freezing.

Deep Dish Pork Pie

- 2 tablespoons corn oil margarine
- 1/4 cup chopped onion 1/4 cup chopped celery
- 3 tablespoons corn starch 2 cups chicken bouillon
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil leaves
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups cooked pork cubes
- 1 cup sliced cooked carrots
- l cup cooked green beans
- 1 can (834 oz.) corn, drained (1 cup) 1 recipe Single Crust Pastry

In 3-quart saucepan melt margarine over medium heat. Add onion and celery: cook 2 minutes or until tender. Stir in corn starch until smooth. Remove from heat. Gradually stir in bouillon until smooth. Add basil and pepper. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Stir in pork, carrots, green beans and corn. Pour into 9 x 11/2inch deep dish pie plate. On lightly floured surface roll out pastry for top crust. Cut slits to permit steam to escape during baking and place over filling. Seal and flute edges. Bake in 375 degrees oven 35 to 40 minutes or until crust is golden brown. Makes 6 servings

Strawberry Pie with Meringue Crust 2 pints strawberries, sliced (about 3½ cups)

1/2 cup sugar 3 tablespoons corn starch

1 cup water

cup heavy cream, whipped Prepare Meringue Crust. In small bowl crush 1 cup of the strawberries. In 2-quart saucepan stir together sugar and corn starch. Gradually stir in water until smooth. Stir in crushed strawberries. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Cool. Pour over remaining sliced strawberries; toss to coat evenly. Spoon into prepared crust. Refrigerate at least 1 hour or until set. Spread whipped cream over pie. If desired, garnish with sliced strawberries. Makes 1 (9-inch) pies Meringue Crust

In small bowl stir together 1/4 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons finely ground blanched almonds and 2 tablespoons corn starch. In small bowl with mixer at high speed beat 2 egg whites until foamy. Add 1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar and 1/16 teaspoon salt. Continue beating until soft peaks form. Gradually add 1/4 cup sugar; beat until stiff peaks form. Fold in almond mixture. Spread mixture onto bottom and sides of a well-greased 9-inch pie plate, building up sides to form a shell. Bake in 275 degrees F. oven 1 hour. Turn off heat. Leave meringue in oven with door closed for 1 hour. Remove from oven and cool completely on wire rack. Makes 1 (9-inch) meringue

This dessert features a fresh approach to pies with a meringue crust and strawberry filling. It's a delicious combination to put some spark into a dessert. Meringues are not difficult to make and the results are always approved by all.

Say 'soup 'n sandwiches

Say "soup and sandwiches" and watch the faces of youngsters and oldsters alike light up. Not only is this a favorite combination for lunches and light suppers; it's a most nutritious mealtime duet, especially if both are

According to the National Broiler Council, you can cook one chicken and make both a pot of hearty soup and a tasty filling for sandwiches. Chicken is one of the most economical sources of complete protein available at the meat counter today. Savings are even greater when a whole bird is used - including even the skin and bones.

With the busy season of fall activities in full force, it's important to serve meals that will help keep the family operating at peak efficiency. Simmer a chicken, using the recipe below. Then use it all to prepare the two recipes developed by the National Broiler Council.

One is for "Chicken Tacos," a different kind of sandwich the whole family will enjoy. Or, instead of taco shells, the filling may be placed on a hot dog roll, pita bread or an open bun.

The soup is a delicious and unusual combination of chicken and frozen snow peas. Together they provide a meal that is well balanced, rich in vitamins and protein but low in calories and in fat content.

There are many variations of chicken soup, ranging from clear broths to thick, creamy textures. And only slight changes in seasonings and ingredients used will produce an almost endless variety of chicken fillings for sandwiches. Let your imagination take over and you'll be surprised how far one chicken can be stretched for real savings in your food budget

Simmered Chicken

- (For Tacos and Soup) 1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts
- 4 cups water, divided
- small onion, quartered 1 rib celery, with leaves
- 2 teaspoons salt, divided 14 teaspoon pepper

In deep saucepan, place chicken with 2 cups of the water, onion, celery, I teaspoon of the salt and pepper. Cover and simmer about 45 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Remove chicken from saucepan and refrigerate until chicken can be handled with ease; remove all meat and cut into bite-size pieces and place in refrigerator until ready to use. To contents of saucepan, add chicken bones and skin, the remaining water and salt. Cook 10 minutes more to gain more broth for soup

CHICKEN TACOS

- 2 cups broiler-fryer chicken, cooked and diced 2 tablespoons peanut oil
- 12 cup chopped onion
- 2 cup chopped green pepper 1 envelope (112 ounces) taco seasoning mix
- 3 fresh tomatoes, chopped 2 cup chicken broth
- 12 taco shells 2 cups shredded lettuce
- 1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese 1 avocado, peeled and chopped
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

In large fry pan, place oil and heat to medium temperature. Add onion and peppers and stir-fry about 3 minutes or until soft. Add chicken and stir-fry about 2 minutes or until hot. Add taco seasoning mix, tomatoes and chicken broth; simmer 10 minutes. In 350 degree F. oven, heat taco shells about 5 minutes or until hot. Spoon chicken filling into shells* and top with lettuce, cheese and avocado, which has been dipped in lemon juice to prevent browning.

Makes 6 servings.

*Instead of taco shells, filling can be placed in hot dog roll, pita bread or open bun.

Chicken and Snow Pea Soup 1 cup broiler-fryer chicken, cooked and diced

- 4 cups chicken broth
- l tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon marjoram
- 6 peppercorns
- 3 whole cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon thyme
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 tablespoons rendered chicken fat or cooking oil

VACCINATING YOUR DOG AGAINST DISTEMPER

Distemper is a highly contagious viral disease of dogs, and is frequently fatal. This disease is very prevelent in Southern California. It is characterized by a high fever, a discharge from the eyes and nose, occasional diarrhea, and eventually nervous symptoms and even convulsions.

Puppies should be vaccinated between 6 and 8 weeks of age. At our hospitals, we vaccinate for distemper-measles. Dogs do not get measles; however measles vaccine has been shown to give puppies a better immunity against distemper than distemper vaccine alone. We recommend boosters for distemper, hepatitis and para-influenza between 10 and 11 weeks of age, and again at 13 to 14 weeks of age, followed by annual vaccinations.

The charge for distemper vaccinations at the Central and Montclair Veterinary Hospitals is $10.00.

Professor says people need to have pets

By VONNE ROBERTSON Staff Writer

Each person has a vital need to experience close contact with the environment, animals, plants or other natural materials, according to a Claremont professor.

'Human evolution was set in a landscape with people relating to animals and all living and non-living things in many kinds of ways. There is a psychological need for this interaction," said Paul H. Shepard, professor of natural philosophy and human ecology at Pitzer College. Ideally, he said, people should teraction with pets, Shepard described domesticated animals as 'deformed' and zoo animals as sick.

"Domesticated animals have lost their 'otherness' identity in their relationship with humans," he explained. "They have been deprived of the right to live their own lives and follow their own natural hab-

But, the professor noted, there is a real advantage to the human-pet relationship. Humans, he continued, learn a humility about the natural world. "All creatures have a place. But if the ones you see are totally oriented to people and their appearance has been modified through selective breeding, these animals have lost the very thing for which they are important. Ecologically speaking, a zoo animal is a 'sick' animal and a domesticated animal is deformed. But these are better than nothing. They still are therapeutic in a world where we are being constantly more deprived of contact with non-humans.

The professor said it is important to determine the value of the presence of animals. "Our culture has come to ask 'what use is this creature or that plant to us?'," he added. "If we can assign a practical use to something, it is regarded as important. That is too narrow a defi-

"The main value may be psychological. The usefulness of a plant or animal must be evaulated in a broader way.

Shepard noted that in past generations a child was a member of an extended family. The youngsters observed firsthand the process of birth, death, aging of grandparents, and the interrelationships of cousins, brothers and sisters and aunts and uncles

Such rich social experiences are lacking in the nuclear family in which many children are now being raised. In addition, Shepard added, former generations experienced a wide realm of non-human relationships.

Experience in the non-human world allows a person to understand the non-human traits within himself. You need to understand the traits of the beaver, the fox or the bear in you.

Shepard contends that children have a natural love of animals 'Among the first words a child learn are names of animals," he observed. "The very young child will ask the name of an animal, repeat it and remember it. The child groups classifications of animals and builds conceptual models in his head.

Pritikin diet a dilemma for established medicine

By REX DALTON Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES - The popularized Nathan Pritikin lifestyle and diet program which aims to reduce blood substances that cause heart disease puts established medicine in a dilemma.

Physician heart specialists want to encourage people to improve their diets - through programs like Pritikin's - to decrease the possibility of heart disease. but they strongly object to the offensive promotion of a program they see as economically motivated.

There are many positive aspects of of Pritikin's concepts, the cardiologists say, but he makes outlandish claims that his lifestyle concept cures arthritis, psoriasis and reverses the buildup of fatty deposits in arteries.

Pritikin's lifestyle concept is a low-cholesterol, nonfat, non-sugar diet combined with light exercise. It is advanced in two popular books, newspaper ads and in television and radio talk show appearances by Pritikin. Although he has no degrees, Pritikin refined his lifestyle approach at his Longevity Institute in Santa The institute, where people pay about $5,000 to stay 26 days and learn the lifestyle, is now in Santa Monica. Recently, Pritikin expanded his lifestyle concept through an outreach program that teaches his ideas on an outpatient basis. A free introductory lecture to the outpatient Pritikin Better Health Program was held recently at South Bay Hospital, Redondo Beach. The seven-week program of three-hour per week lectures costs about $500. The program will be held at a motel. Dr. Gary L. Kissel, South Bay's chief of cardiology, said he favors many of Pritikin's ideas as preventive health measures, but doesn't like Pritikin's group using the hospital facilities because of their techniques. "I'm impressed with Pritikin's ability to lower people's blood cholesterol levels and successfully get them to lose weight, but I find his methods of reaching people offensive," he said with a grimace. If Pritikin would temper his methods I think he might get more accomplished, and he could work more with established medicine.

Of his concepts, Pritikin said: "The idea is to gradually get the public involved in improving their health. We teach them the rationale and procedure for changing their whole nutritional way of life. 'No one can say, 'Stop eating hot dogs because they are bad for you,' and expect people to just stop. Someone has to explain things so as to give people intellectual conviction - to convince them what they are doing with

"Even if the program cost $50,000 it would be a bargain for most. It will improve the quality of life.

Advocates of the Pritikin concept - and physicians who look at it with a scientific eye - say the diet does have a dramatic effect on a person's health. People who go on the diet lose about 20 pounds in a month. High blood pressure is frequently controlled so patients don't need medication. There has been some success in helping diabetics reduce their need for insulin.

Dr. Michael Criley, chief of cardiology at County Harbor-UCLA Medical Center, Torrance, said, "The pros of his program are that he is cognizant of the very poor quality of the American diet.

'He has taken a diet no one in their right mind thought could be made palatable and sold it to the public. His way of presenting things is very forceful, very attractive. He's quite a charismatic fellow.

"He's pulled off a minor miracle by getting a sizable number of people to eat food no one could guess they could be made to eat. It has developed into an alternative mode of therapy

'On the negative side, he is able to make claims he doesn't have to substantiate because he isn't a scientist. He makes these outlandish and totally false statements about the diet improving arthritis, and such.

'In a rigorous scientific community, much of what he says doesn't hold water. It's not always that what he says is totally wrong, it's just he can't prove it in a scientific sense. If a scientist were to make his claims, he would be drummed out of the corps and censured.

Criley does say, however, that he has been to the Longevity Institute and was encouraged by what he saw.

"My personal reading of it is that I wouldn't hesitate to send a patient there. He isn't doing anything dangerous. There isn't any heavy exercise in the program.

'And there is a physician who is the medical director at the Longevity Institute.

"But as I understand it, this traveling road show (outpatient program) doesn't have much to do with the people who work at the institute.

'What they are saying at the outpatient program is eminently reasonable, it's just overpriced.

One of the major points of controversy over Pritikin's program - and others like it - is whether or not the stringent diet actually reverses the buildup of fatty deposits in arteries - a process called atherosclerosis.

A study under way at the University of Southern California is part of a nationwide test to definitively determine if low intakes of cholesterol actually reverse the buildup, or merely stop it. The results aren't expected

Don't suppress healthy mourning, expert advises

By LINDA BERGSTEDT Panorama Editor

"Mourning is appropriate and healthy for an adaptive process — don't suppress, depress or undermine it."

These were the words of Dr. Glen Davidson during a recent "Living With Dying" educational seminar at San Antonio Community Hospital. The event, sponsored by local funeral directors, drew an audience mainly comprised of nurses, nurses aides and others in the helping professions.

"The challenge to the helping professions is the understanding of the mourning process," said Davidson, professor, author and lecturer from Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, where he is chief of thanatology (the study of death).

The speaker said that traditionally up until 1965, the medical profession thought of mourning as a disease. Because of this concept, the public "expects a shot (anti-depressant or tranquilizer) if they can't handle it.," he said. If mourning is not a disease, then it is questionable if "popping a pill is the answer," he suggested.

In an extensive study, Davidson conducted by interviewing 1,200 adult mourners, the professor came up with some interesting statistics about mourning and the duration of the grieving process.

He described results of his study, defining the four basic phases the average mourner seems to go through. In the initial stage of mourning, the characteristics are shock and numbness, resistance to stimuli, difficulty in making judgements because complex decisions can't be worked through in order, impeded functioning, emotional outbursts, switching emotions and stunned

These characteristics, Davidson said, are most intense during the first 48 hours to two weeks.

"The mourning process has just begun and will peak again a year later and also on any important date in the mourner's life," he said

"Searching and yearning" is the way he described the second phase when the mourner is very sensitive to stimuli, feels anger and guilt, is restless and impatient, is ambigious and is testing what is real.

It is during this second phase of mourning that many widows report they feel as though "the deceased spouse has returned from the dead. This happens because they become highly sensitive to outside stimuli when in this crisis," he said.

"Bizarre experiences are common to mourners up to 24 months after the death of a loved one," he said. Memory blocks develop in this second phase of mourning that lasts from two weeks to approximately four months. Social contacts are important to the mourner at this time.

The third phase of mourning is marked by characteristics of disorientation. The mourner is disorganized, depressed, filled with guilt (mostly selfguilt), has a significant weight loss or gain of 10 pounds or more and feels a deep awareness of reality.

This happens from the fourth to the seventh month of mourning and like the first two phases, characteristics will peak again on "significant days to the mourner."

Davidson said in his study that religion became very important to the mourners, but the majority left organized religion after six months.

This is partly because the mourners found an overwhelming majority of the general public (and fellow church goers) ostracizes the characteristics of mourning that go on beyond two weeks after the death of the loved

It is during this phase of mourning, he explained, that aged widows suffer from malnutrition because they have developed poor eating habits.

"First they eat what is easiest, then junk food and finally anything — including pet food," he said.

He suggested this happens because of low-motivation and that helping professionals should be alert about what the mourning person is doing with three basic things-proper nutrition, proper exercise and adequate rest.

Reorganization is the fourth phase experienced by mourners in Davidson's study. At this time, mourners feel a sense of telease, have renewed energy, are able to make judgments better and establish stable, though not necessarily healthy, eating and sleeping habits.

"It takes an average of 18 to 24 months to adapt to a major loss in our lives, whether that loss is a loved one or some other change," Davidson said.

In response to a question from the audience about the difference between acceptance and resignation over the death of a loved one, Davidson cited the book of Psalms in the Bible and said, "We don't need to come to an acceptance, but we must deal with reality. The Psalms deal with things, but are not necessarily an acceptance," he said.

Self-preservation rules are offered

(714- 599-6754 - (213) 967-3988

"We can enter into others suffering without losing our souls," Dr. Glen Davidson advised other helping professionals cluring a recent educational seminar at San Antonio Community Hospital.

"Living With Dying: Challenge to the Helping Professions" was the topic of the seminar that was cosponsored by local mortuaries — Draper Mortuary and Richardson-Peterson Funeral Home, both in Ontario, and Stone Funeral Home of Upland.

Davidson, head of thanatology (study of death) at Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, suggested several rules for self-preservation on the part of those helping mourners.

"We are only able to be oriented while with other people," he said, and "the biggest danger and challenge to helping professionals is to identify with our own health and not mime the patients in our care."

He continued by saying, "A nurse cannot function if counter-trans ference occurs when she will abandon her role as a nurse or act as though she could be both parent and nurse to the patient."

He advised pastors dealing with mourners to "start" the ear instead of the mouth.

"Your role is to listen, to hear the suffering, rather," than to be the spiritual advisor," he said.

Davidson suggested that "one can't be a crisistic intervenor and a long-term counselor" at the same time and "For self-preservations, first know your unique function to those in crises. This is why there is a need to work in a team," he said.

"You have to learn to listen, especially to what you don't want to hear. You need to be sensitive to an idea and ask yourself, 'Am I becoming bored with myatient?' If you are, it means you are not useful."

Davidson, who conducted a study of 1,200 mourners, suggested the helping professionals orient with their stammates in helping the patient.

"You have come to learn to trust your own body signs, therefore learn to trust other's body signs," he said. "Finally, you have to learn what the data of mourning

He suggested that rather than "caring" about others, people should have compassion instead which means an entering into another's suffering.

Seaver family home will be dedicated as the Pomona College Alumni Center. The second floor and lower levels will be used by alumni personnel as offices and the main floor will be utilized for receptions, dinner parties and meetings.

Carlton and Estella Seaver moved from Claremont and built the house in Pomona around 1890. There are no records to show the exact year or the builder. Their six children, Georgia, Frank, Bryon, Homer, Marguerite and Nila, graduated from Pomona College.

Frank, 1905 graduate, was a trustee of Pomona College from 1947 until his death in 1964. The last Seaver to occupy the home was Nila who lived there until her death in 1978. She willed the house to Pomona College.

A gift from an anonymous donor made it financially possible to move the Seaver home to the campus.

When the house was moved, the operation was described as like seeing a ghostly giant moving slowly through the streets from Pomona to Claremont. The house had to be cut in half and the roof removed in order to relocate the 174ton structure

As the house was moved through the streets, it was lighted like a Christmas tree, and interested invidivuals followed on foot, bikes and roller skates -among them, Richard tor, for the house to be set Seaver, Carlton and Estella Seaver's grandson.

THIS D

Author's roots are in barrios of the Southland

By BLAINE METCALF

Staff Writer Ron Aries has found the way from the Southern California barrios to the tree-lined streets of Claremont, a fete he says is still unusual for Chicanos

A journalist, Aries has authored two books and written dozens of newspaper and magazine articles during the past 15 years

His novel, "The Road to Tamazunchale", was nominated for a National Book Award in the late 1970s, and his other book, "The Chicanos: Mexican American Voices." is an anthology of Chicano literature.

Throughout his career, Aries has written works in both fiction and non-fiction, both of which he says he is comfortable with.

Aries says his earliest published work came as a result of his participation in UCLA's Mexican American Study

Project. The purpose of the project, carried out during the mid-1960s, was to examine and publish information about Chicano history and lifestyles in the West and Southwestern regions of the United States, he says.

Aries graduated from UCLA with degress in both Spanish and journalism, and he credits both with aiding him in his pursuit of a writing career. Upon leaving UCLA, Aries spent a short stint with the Peace Corps with assignments in several countries. After leaving the Peace Corps, Aries got a job in Caracas, Venezuela, working for the Associated Press,

Aries says that working for a major news service helped him to refine and develop various skills important to any style of writing, such as beginning a story with a strong, impressive first paragraph.

Aries later worked for a British newspaper in Buenos Aires, Argentina. There he says that he worked with reporters from Wales, Scotland, and England. From these fellow reporters, he says, he learned about the importance of the word and of language usage. While working in Washington, D.C. sometime later, he discovered others who could use words effectively

In Washington, he was working for the Inter-American Development Bank as a loan writer and editor. Part of his job, he says, was to read and then rewrite loan applications from various sources. He found that many of them were as well - developed as writings of many published authors.

The various news writing experiences, in addition to his loan-writing work, helped to reinforce Aries' belief in the power of language and the respect he holds for it, a respect that reaches back into his earliest schooling where several teachers helped to impress on him the importance of proper communication abilities.

One teacher, he says, used to play games using words. A common example the teacher used to point out the uniqueness of individual words was the word 'awkward'', the only word in the English language to use the letters "wkw" together and in that order.

Aries, also, has been a teacher. He has taught everything from bonehead English to English literature classes, he says. Based on his own experience, Aries says that he feels that it is important for anyone wanting to be a published writer to gain as much experience with various styles and forms as possible.

In recent years, Aries has written several scripts for television shows such as "MASH" and "Lou Grant." Though none of them were accepted for use. Aries says that he feels they were valuable lessons in writing style. Presently, Aries is working on a book contracted to him by a publisher. The book's working title is "Window On America" and the book is an examination of immigration as seen through the eyes of immigrants from Latin America, he

During the past months, Aries has traveled to Latin America where he has been interviewing ex-immigrants, those who once moved to this country, but eventually returned home for one reason or another. Aries was born and raised in Southern California

For writers' day

Noted authors slated at MSAC

A Pulitzer Prize winner, an Emmy Award winner, and an all-time science-fiction favorite head the list of visiting speakers at the Fifth Mt. San Antonio College Writers' Day Festival (WDF), Saturday April 26, starting at 9 a.m.

MSAC Alumnus (1962) Sam Shepard, who won the 79 Pulitzer for his off-Broadway play "Buried Child," will join Michele Gallery, 79 Emmy winner for one of her Lou Grant Show scripts, perennial favorite Ray Bradbury, and at least four other famous writers are scheduled for the day-long event.

MSAC Alumna (1957) Joan Tewkesbury, noted for film scripts ("Nashville"), TV scripts ("The Tenth Month"), and as a recent film director ("Old Boyfriends"), and Cal Poly professor and advocacy/investigative writer Ruth Harmer (The High Cost of Dying, American Medical Avarice) are also scheduled.

Rounding out the versatile lineup are Ken Atchity, Occidental College professor, poet, publisher (LA House) and periodical editor (Contemporary Quarterly and Dreamworks), and Joan Talmage Weiss, freelancer, creative writing teacher, and author of juvenile fiction (The Lemonade Lady, Home for a Stranger)

In addition to lecture-discussions beginning at 9:30 a.m., the Writers' Day Festival promises a box lunch, an opportunity to buy, and have autographed books written by the guest authors, a panel discussion involving all the writers, a literary magazine, and a day-concluding writing awards ceremony.

The magazine and the awards are the culmination of a MSAC district-wide writing contest held in January and February. Prize-winners in a number of categories and in divisions representing MSAC students, local high school students, and residents of the MSAC district will receive cash prizes from the invited writers.

Total price for the day's festivities is $3, payable in advance to Elizabeth Dorning, MSAC English department, 1100 N. Grand Ave., Walnut, CA 91789. Deadline for receipt of fee is April 21.
